

Beaven-Benedetti.

Miss Bernadine Beaven, one of Loretto's most attractive and popular young women, and Louis Benedetti of Frankfort surprised their friends last Friday by being united in marriage at St. Francis church at Chicago by Rev. N. Werner. Miss Eva Thompson and Ed Mills, both of Loretto, were the attendants.

The bride is a daughter of the late F. K. Beaven and Mrs. Cora Abell Beaven. During the past year she has been president of the Parent-Teacher Association at Loretto, and she will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends in that community.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Benedetti of this city, and holds a position with the State Garage at Frankfort. He is an upright, industrious young man with a promising future.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Benedetti left on a short bridal trip, after which they went to Versailles where they will make their home.

NELSON COUNTY. The fourth county in order of formation, Nelson County was created on November 29, 1784, from part of Jefferson County and named for Thomas Nelson, Virginia governor and signer of the Declaration of Independence. The county covers 437 square miles and is bordered by Marion, Washington, Anderson, Spencer, Bullitt, Hardin, and Larue counties. BARDSTOWN, the county seat, was settled in 1780 and named for David Baird, one of the original settlers.

The topography is varied and extends from the flatlands around Bardstown to rolling hills in the east and knobs in the west. The Rolling Fork River forms the southwest border, and the Beech Fork River runs along the eastern county line. In 1987, 75 percent of the land was in farms, and 65 percent of farmland was in cultivation. Nelson ranked thirteenth among counties in agricultural receipts from tobacco, livestock, nursery and greenhouse crops, hay, vegetables, and fruit. Natural resources include limestone and dolomite.

Mounds, earthworks, and relics indicate prehistoric Native Americans inhabited the area before the first settlers arrived in 1775. Cols. Isaac Cox and James Rogers built their stations in the area in 1780, and Samuel Pottinger built his station in 1781. By 1783 land warrants had been issued for 20,000 acres. The county became an important early settlement for Roman Catholics. In 1808 Bishop Benedict J. FLAGET established the first inland diocese in the nation at Bardstown. In 1812 Catherine Spalding became the first superior of the SISTERS OF CHARITY of Nazareth at St. Thomas Farm. In 1819 St. Joseph's Seminary and St. Joseph's College were opened in Bardstown. In 1848 the Abbey of Our Lady of Gethsemani was founded.

Two small Civil War skirmishes occurred in Nelson County. On October 4, 1862, detachments of Gen. Don Carlos Buell's troops were defeated by soldiers from the command of Confederate Gen. Braxton Bragg, and the Union's 78th Indiana Regiment was captured at Bardstown. On July 5, 1863, Gen. John Hunt Morgan led his troops through the county and engaged Union cavalry. The county was raided by Marcellus Jerome Clarke ("Sue Mundy") and William Quantrill for the Confederates, and by Edward Terrell for the Union.

In 1844 T.W. Samuels began commercially distilling whiskey at Deatsville. In 1896 more than twenty-six Nelson County distilleries were producing whiskey for national distribution. Many did not survive prohibition, but after repeal in 1933, several new plants were built on the old sites. The Churchill Distilling Company built a plant near Boston in 1934, and nineteen years later it was purchased by the James B. Beam Distillery, makers of Jim Beam bourbon. Old Heaven Hill Distillery, which produces a bourbon of the same name, was built two miles from Bardstown in 1934. Tom Moore Distillery (1889) was sold in the 1940s to Barton Brands, Ltd., which produces Tom Moore, Very Early Barton, and Kentucky Gentlemen.

Other industries include American Greetings Corporation; Owens-Illinois, plastic bottle and carrier producer; and Nu-Hote International, which came in 1972 and employs 382 in production of business machine ribbons. Rail service is provided by R.J. Corman Railroad Transportation. The Bluegrass Parkway traverses the county, which is also served by U.S. 31E and U.S. 150. In 1990 tourism brought in more than $43.6 million. Among the tourist attractions are My Old Kentucky Home State Park; the outdoor drama The Stephen Foster Story; St. Joseph Proto-Cathedral; Old Talbott Tavern, an inn since the late 1700s; the Oscar Getz Museum of Whiskey History; Knobs State Forest; and Old Bardstown Village.

There are four incorporated towns in Nelson County: Bardstown, Bloomfield, Fairfield, and New Haven.

Nelson County had a population of 23,477 in 1970; 27,584 in 1980; and 29,710 in 1990.

MARION COUNTY. The eighty-fourth county in order of formation, Marion County is located in central Kentucky. Bordered by Boyle, Casey, Larue, Mercer, Nelson, Taylor, and Washington counties, it contains an area of 347 square miles. Marion was formed from Washington County on January 25, 1834, and was named in honor of Gen. Francis Marion, the "Swamp Fox" of the Revolutionary War who won fame for his military tactics against the British forces in the southern theater of operations. The county seat of Marion County is LEBANON.

The county is located within the Knobs geographic region of Kentucky, and the topography is undulating to hilly. Farms occupy 82 percent of the land area with 66 percent of those in cultivation of tobacco, livestock, poultry, fruits, hay, soybeans, and vegetables. In 1987 the county ranked twenty-first in Kentucky in agricultural receipts. It has deposits of dolomite and limestone. The major stream is the Rolling Fork of the Salt River.

The area was first explored by the surveyors James and Jacob Sandusky and was settled in 1779, along Hardin's Creek, by Charles and Edward Beavin. Marion County became a settlement for Roman Catholics from Charles, Prince George, and St. Mary's counties, Maryland. By 1785 Basil Hayden, Sr., had settled twenty-five Catholic families on the headwaters of Pottinger's Creek. The first Roman Catholic church in Kentucky was built on this site in 1792, where the town of Holy Cross is now located. Several of the Catholic churches were formed by the missionary priest, Charles Nerinckx, of Belgium. The Catholic influence was further demonstrated in 1821, when St. Mary's College was established at Loretto. The motherhouse of the Sisters of Loretto is located in the county.

The communities developed in Marion County include the incorporated towns of Lebanon, Bradfordsville, Loretto, and Rayswick. The county is served by CSX Transportation and U.S. 68. The largest industries are Jane & Linda Sportswear Company, established in 1952, producing women's sportswear, and the Independent Stave Company, manufacturer of whiskey barrels. Both plants are in Lebanon. Loretto is the site of the county's most famous industry, Star Hill Distillery, which produces one of Kentucky's premiere bourbon whiskeys, Maker's Mark. In 1988 tourism spending was $3.3 million. Each October, Country Ham Days draw a large number of visitors.

The population of Marion County was 16,714 in 1970; 17,910 in 1980; and 16,499 in 1990.

WASHINGTON COUNTY. Washington County, the tenth in order of formation, is located in central Kentucky in the Outer Bluegrass region. It is bordered by Nelson, Spencer, Anderson, Mercer, Boyle, and Marion counties and has an area of 301 square miles. The county is entirely within the watershed of Salt River, and fertile farms and pastures lie between the numerous hills, or knobs. The county seat is SPRINGFIELD.

The first settlers came to what is now Washington County in 1775 from the fort at Harrodsburg, drawn by the area's abundance of game, water, and salt. They traveled along the numerous animal traces. The first settlements were made by James Sandusky on Pleasant Run in 1776 and by Samuel Cartwright, who in 1779 built a house on the creek that now bears his name. The influx of settlers increased dramatically after the Revolutionary War. Many came to claim land owed to them for military service, and by 1800 there were 9,050 people in Washington County. This first generation was a mobile and ambitious lot who staked their claims, planted corn, built cabins, and often moved on. The 1810 census for Washington County counted 13,248 people. By 1820 the number had grown to 15,956, including 12,159 whites, 3,752 slaves, and 52 free people of color.

The area was originally a part of Kentucky County, Virginia, and then part of Jefferson County. Washington County totaled nearly 450,000 acres when it was formed by the new state of Kentucky on June 2, 1792. It was named for President George Washington and was created through the intercession of Gen. Matthew Walton, a landowner and resident of the area. The first court met at the home of Col. John Hardin. Springfield became the county seat in 1793.

In 1827 Washington County was split up to form Anderson County. The population continued to grow and reached a maximum of 19,144 in 1830. Washington County lost its southern area to form Marion County in 1833, a move that reduced the county's population to 10,596 by 1840. In 1833 a cholera epidemic killed eighty people in Springfield alone. Washington County acquired its first covered bridge, across the Little Beach River on the Harrodsburg Road in 1834, and its first turnpike, from Springfield to Bardstown with a connection to Louisville, in 1837. In the 1850s, Washington County joined the state school system and opened the first county fair, staged by the Springfield Union Agricultural and Mechanical Society.

During the Civil War, most men from the county fought for the Union, but some joined the Confederate army. Confederate Gen. Braxton Bragg's army passed through Springfield on October 6 and 7, 1862, followed by Union Gen. Don Carlos Buell's army, both en route to the Battle of Perryville. There was a brief skirmish between Buell's vanguard and Bragg's rear guard west of town. According to a local legend, Union soldiers looted a distillery warehouse west of Springfield, became very drunk, and made off with great quantities of whiskey.

In the era between the War of 1812 and the Civil War, Washington County produced corn, hogs, and whiskey, but only negligible amounts of tobacco. After the Civil War, the prewar levels of trade were not reestablished for twenty-five years. The recovery was prompted by the advent of white burley tobacco into the region, the arrival of the railroad, and the subsequent connection to the Louisville market. The black population of the county declined by nearly 50 percent after the war. Vigilantes known as "Skagg's men," who harassed and attacked the new freedmen in adjacent Marion, Boyle, and Mercer counties, were one factor in the exodus.

After the war, the county voted to sell $400,000 in railroad bonds and to levy a 1 percent tax to finance the proposed Cumberland & Ohio Railroad link between Nashville and Cincinnati. Resentment arose over the routing through Springfield instead of the northerly towns, and vigilantes destroyed a railroad camp. After the line went bankrupt, the county seized what assets it could and persuaded the Louisville & Nashville Railroad (now CSX Transportation) to build a line to Springfield, completed on January 1, 1888. The line gave Washington County vital access to Louisville markets for livestock, milk, grain, and tobacco. It was abandoned by CSX in 1984. In June 1890 the county got its first modern public utility when the Springfield Electric Light and Water Company won a franchise. By November 1901, a power plant was in operation. Just after the turn of the century, the BLACK PATCH WAR over the tobacco prices paid to farmers brought a period of lawlessness to the county.

The farm depression of the mid-1920s and the Great Depression of the 1930s cost the county its two daily passenger trains to Louisville. Washington County's first park, the Lincoln Homestead State Park, was dedicated June 12, 1934, on the site where President Abraham Lincoln's grandfather had settled in 1782. After World War II, the railroad-era relationship between Louisville, as consumer and the down-state counties as suppliers began to disintegrate. Persistent high unemployment caused the population to diminish and the commodity markets to fade. Nevertheless, the county acquired a new state golf course in the 1950s, and a new airport and consolidated high schools were built in the 1960s. The Bluegrass Parkway connecting Lexington and Elizabethtown was completed across the northern part of the county in 1965 and a substantial rural water system was created in the 1980s.

In 1990 the county remained rural, with many residents engaged in tobacco farming or cattle production. Most of the county's industrial jobs were located in Springfield; the largest employers were the Springfield Redrying Corporation (tobacco), Armour Food Company (milk products), H&W Industries (construction materials), and Shelburne Industries (clothing). The population of the county was 10,728 in 1970; 10,764 in 1980; and 10,411 in 1990.

Tim Beaven

100 Meriden St.
Springfield, MA 01103

Dear Tim:

I found the baptismal records of three children of Charles C. Beaven & Susanna Mary Alvey in St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church Records. St. Francis Xavier Church is located at Raywick, Ky in Marion County.

St. Francis Xavier baptismal records date from 1840 and the marriages records date from 1845. I did not find a record of marriage for Charles Beaven and Susanna Alvey.

My copy of St. Francis Xavier Records was done by John A. Lyons, August 1978. He made references to other sources throughout his work. On several entries he has "see Beaven Genealogy" and gives a page number. I called Mr. Gerald Thompson (local genealogist I obtained my copy of John Lyons' manuscript from) and asked for his opinion of these references. Neither of us know of a book on Beaven genealogy so we can only assume John Lyons was making references to his files (and/or works). John Lyons died some time ago and it is my understanding that his works were given to Bellarmine College, Louisville, Ky. I do not know if his family files were included with the manuscripts. The Filson Club (Louisville, Ky) through the cooperation of Bellarmine College made copies of John Lyons works and have made them part of their collection.

The following Beaven baptisms were from St. Francis Xavier Church Records by John A. Lyons:

of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Mrs. Eliza Beaven Dead.

Mrs. Eliza Crouch Beaven, widow of William Beaven, of Marion county, departed this life fortified by the rites of the church, December 29, at the home of her son, Byrne Beaven, of Loretto. Her death was an echo of her exemplary life, peaceful and holy. Surrounded by her two sons, Messrs. Byrne and Kendrick Beaven, her devoted daughter-in-law, Mrs. B. Beaven, and her adopted daughter, Mother Bernadine Jarboe, of the Sisters of Mercy, Louisville, she breathed forth her gentle spirit into the hands of her Creator.

The dearly deceased was born December 19, 1837, at Saloma, Taylor county, and was a descendant of those noble pioneers who braved the dangers of frontier life to establish a Catholic colony in Kentucky. Walter Jarboe, her maternal grandfather, was a great grandson of Thomas Jarboe, who came to Maryland with Lord Baltimore and afterward emigrated to Kentucky in 1789, settling near Lebanon, on Hardin's creek. After Mrs. Beaven's father died her mother took her three baby girls to live in the old colonial homestead. Theirs was the choice privilege of being reared in a holy and she complexion its fairness; but that beauty of soul acquired by a long life spent in the practice of heroic virtue, and patient suffering rendered this aged faced woman beautiful still.

She was confined to her bed for the last five years, yet she never lost any of her sweet patient spirit. Being in her eighty-sixth year, her death was caused by general debility, although she was conscious to the last. The funeral took place at St. Charles' church with requiem high mass sung by Rev. Father Mensa. Her remains were laid to rest beside her beloved husband in St. Charles' cemetery, in the presence of her many relatives and friends. May we not fondly hope that when she stood before the Great White Throne to be judged, her long life of charity and self sacrifice recorded in the great book in letters of gold, merited for her to hear from the sacred lips of our Blessed Redeemer these consoling words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

May her soul rest in peace. * * *

POULTRY INDUSTRY NEEDS EFFICIENCY.

That efficiency in production will be the key note of the Poultry Conference of the Farm and Home Convention to be held in Lexington January 29 to February 1, is the statement just issued by J. Holmes Martin, Poultry Department, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Our reports show," says Prof. Martin, "that in those flocks where records have been kept, where proper feeding has been introduced, and where culling has been used to rid the flock of boarder hens the production has been increased one hundred per cent over that held by the State at large. ## CHAPTER V

THE BEAVEN LINE

Through our Beaven ancestry we are connected with the ancient British race, for this family is distinctly Welsh in origin. The name is made up of the two Welsh words Ap Evan, which mean "son of Evan." The usual modern spelling of the name in England is Bevan. In a collection of names of gentry in Ireland I found a De Bivin and in Great Britain the name has been long borne by people of prominence in professional and business life. Bevan seems the logically correct spelling, but the different branches of the family brought to America, show varieties of the old spellings and even these have been rarely consistent, in the same branch. There was a branch, of John and Charles, settled 1684 at Merion, Pa., Quakers, who spell the name Bevan. These Bevans who claim descent from the old Welsh Kings came direct from Wales. The first to come to Maryland was one Hugh Bevin who had a law suit 1658 and died testate, leaving no children.

The second of the name to reach the Maryland Colony was our ancestor, Charles Beaven, who came in some time before 1666, for in that year he secured the land he was entitled to as an immigrant who had paid his own way and for that reason, called a gentleman. I am sure this was our ancestor for two names was Charles, the ever-recurring and favorite name in the family down to our own day, and he spelled his name Beav... the only one of the newcomers to do so, which spelling in spite of aberrant forms, still persists in the family. Andrew and Ellis, evidently brothers, were transported to the Colony before 1678 and their names are spelled in the records Bevin. They settled in eastern Charles County and gave origin to the family of that spelling, in Southern Maryland. Alice Beavin was transported in 1670. The record shows no husband but there may have been one giving rise to this spelling, though I think the various spellings, Beaven, Beavan and Beavin, belong to the same family.

A Rowland Beavins settled in the early days in Somerset County, on the eastern shore, where he grew quite wealthy, left a large family, many descendants of which were soldiers and officers in the wars of the Revolution and that of 1812. In the grant of 400 acres of land called Warwick in 1679 to Rowland Beavins his name was written the English way, Bevan, while his grandson Cornelius, lieutenant in the Indian War, 1749, has it spelled Bevans. A John Bevins got a grant called Mid Summer Hill, in Baltimore County, in 1689. The Census of 1790 shows thirteen spelling the name Beavin and one Beavans in Charles County, four spelling it Beavins in Worcester County, two Bivans and two Bevins in Baltimore County; two Bevin in Montgomery County and five spelling it Beaven in Prince George's County; but the records show the spelling Beavan repeatedly in the last-named county, which I take as a variant of the old Beaven and the same is most probably true of the spelling Beavin in Charles County.

In marriages in Prince George's County before 1800, we find:

Ann Beavin to Henry Trueman, 1790;
Charles Beavin to Catharine Lang, 1792;
Elizabeth Beven to Nathaniel Magruder, 1790;
John Beavin to Verlinda Gibbons, 1796;
Mary Beavin to James Watson, 1799;
William Beavin to Ann Ellixon, 1787;
Charles Beaven to Sara Sasser, 1778;
Charles Beaven to Mary Sasser, 1791;
Elizabeth Beaven to Wm. Sasser, 1781;
Jane Beaven to Wm. Sasser, 1779;
Martha Beaven to Ben Naylor, 1793.

It will be noticed that these connections were with good old families: Trueman and Magruder are historic families; while the Sassers, prime favorites with the family that spelled its name Beaven, was prominent and still is in Prince George's County. The spelling is a corruption of the old French name De Saucier. In the old records of Washington and Nelson counties, Kentucky, we find the variant spelling Beaven and Beavin relating to the same person.

The immigrant, Charles Beaven, seems not to have tarried long in St. Mary's County, but pushed farther north to the newer lands that became Prince George's County where he acquired soon a very considerable estate in land, slaves and personal property. There he was a neighbor of the Berrys, Wights, Greenfields and other prominent planters including Richard Marsham, whose daughter Mary he married about 1685. He spent his life as a farmer. Marsham, his father-in-law, was a prominent, rich and distinguished man, and outlived his son-in-law and daughter, dying in March 1713. He was a member of the Council and held other public offices. He was a large buyer and shipper of tobacco. His first wife and the mother of his children was Catharine, daughter of Giles and Mary (Kitomagund*) Brent. After her death he became the third husband *Kitomagund, the wife of Giles Brent, was the daughter of Kitomagund, the Emperor of the Piscataway Indians. Having no son he appointed her at his death his successor, but this was forbidden by the Salic Law of that tribe, and rejected and threatened by death she was taken by the redoubtable Margaret Brent, sister of Giles, brought up and educated as a Catholic, and named Mary Brent. About 1640 Giles Brent married her, and had by her five children of whom Catharine married Richard Marsham about 1660. Giles Brent was a son of Richard Brent and Elizabeth daughter of Giles Reed and Catharine Greville Reed, she a daughter of Sir Fulke Greville and so on through the Grevilles, Nevilles, Beauchamps, Willoughbys and Plantagenets to Edward III, King of England, as may be seen in "Colonial Families of the U.S.", Vol. 7. Giles Brent came to Maryland 1638 with his sisters Margaret and Mary, and his brother Fulke. He was in the Council, House of Burgesses, a deputy governor, lieutenant colonel of militia and Lord of Fort Kent Manor.

He put down Ingle's Rebellion, but tiring of his puritan neighbors and possibly dissatisfied with the Proprietary, he left Maryland and settled in Westmoreland County, Virginia, on a huge estate, granted him by James II, with right to exercise the Catholic faith called Retirement, where he died in 1671, leaving the bulk of his estate to his eldest son Giles. His noble Indian wife died some years before, and he married again but had no more children. The Brents originate with Sir Odo de Brent, a Norman knight. (1) of Anne Calvert, of Leonard and Anne Brent Calvert. One of his daughters married Samuel Queen from whom the Bardstown, Ky., Queens descend; another married a Waring, the said Mrs. Queen having first married a Brooke.

Charles Beaven died in 1699 testate, and devised his home plantation and another tract called Her Grove adjoining, to Mary his wife for life and at her death to become the property of their son Richard, the eldest son and named for Richard Marsham, her father. To his son Charles and his daughters Sara and Margaret (named for Margaret Brent) 600 acres in Charles County called Hickory Thicket, and to his daughters Elizabeth and Catharine (Brent names) he devised personal property. He devised slaves and other property to his family and made his wife executrix; evidently his sons were too young to act as such. His widow Mary seems to have died at the end of 1712. A paper called a will was probated in Prince George's County at that time devising her whole estate to "My well-beloved Richard Marsham, executor of all my real and personal estate." This absurd paper evidently drawn by herself omits the word "father" and, as her children were not named, was meant as an appointment of him to settle her estate. It was attested by Sara S. and Thomas Blandford.

Richard Beaven, of Charles the pioneer, died testate in 1738, in Prince George's County. He left to his oldest son Charles all his land in Charles County (he lived at the line of that and Prince George's County); to his son Richard he left his home plantation; to his sons Basil, Blandford and Henry he left land, negroes and personal property, and gave freedom to a mulatto Frank. Wm. Neale was a witness to the will. It is evident he had married a Blandford, daughter I suppose, of Thomas and Sara (see Chapter II), the same who attested the will of Mary, supra. Basil alive in 1792, married—Wheeler and had Basil and Wheeler Beaven.

Charles Beaven, of Richard of Prince George's County, died testate 1762 and left his estate of land and negroes to his wife Rebecca and his three sons Richard, Edward and Charles. He made his widow executrix because his sons were too young even to share the trust; possibly mere children. John Claggett and Mary Ann Miles were of attesting witnesses. In this son Edward of the testator I see our Beaven ancestor of Kentucky, the descent being Edward of Charles of Richard of Charles the immigrant. His mother was Rebecca Finch, daughter of Guy and Rebecca Finch of Prince George's County. The Finch family were prominent in Maryland and more so in England, where the name is found among gentry and nobility. One was chief justice and lord keeper in the reign of Charles I. Rebecca was remarried to Benjamin Wheeler a grandson of Major John Wheeler.

Charles Beaven, the youngest son of the immigrant, founded the Hickory Thicket line of Charles County, died 1718 intestate, leaving Rebecca, widow and administratrix who spelled the name Beavin.<sup>(2)</sup> He left children among whom was Charles Beavin who died testate in 1785. The latter devised 100 acres of Hickory Thicket to his son Richard; to his son Paul, land called Huckleberry Swamp; to son Benjamin, 100 acres of Hickory Thicket and remainder to all children, evidently others not named. His son Richard died testate in 1806 and devised 100 acres of Hickory Thicket and part of Huckleberry Swamp to his sons Charles and John, his daughters, Elizabeth, who married Wm. Saucer (Sasser) 1781, and Mary Carter, making Richard his executor. His brother Paul Beavin died testate 1795 and gives his lands called Huckleberry Swamp to his brothers Richard and Benedict. It is certain that the Benedict J. Beavin who came to Nelson County, Kentucky, was the same named in the said will—a Hickory Thicket Beavin, and a collateral relation. He, with the two Gwynns, attested the will of Isle of Wight in 1816. Michael Beavin died testate in said county, 1795, and left Thomas, James M., Ignatius R., William and Joseph, sons, and his wife Priscilla of the same line, I suppose.

The Census of 1790 shows following Beavins as heads of families in Charles County: Ben., Clem., Elizabeth, widow of John, Hezichia, John, Joseph, Leonard, Mathew, Paul, Richard, Richard of Basil, Walter and Wheeler—all of whom, I think, belonged to the prolific Hickory Thicket line. The Joseph named supra settled in Washington County, Kentucky, where he died testate in 1819, leaving daughters Ann Mattingly, Teresa married James Clark, Mary married George Gough, Eleanor Monarch and Dolly Beaven and a son Benedict.

Reverting to Maryland records we find that a John Beaven married Verlinda Gibbons December 8, 1796, in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Piscataway, Prince George's County, and that a Charles Beaven and a John Beaven were connected with that church about same time. That may have been a matter of registration, but it is certain that a Richard Beaven, our ancestor, took the frightful test oath in that church in 1733. Was he flirting with Protestantism or did he merely take the oath to avoid persecution, with a mental reservation? I think the last supposition the true one, as the family has continued Catholic.

Returning to our own line, I have learned nothing of Richard, older brother of Edward and Charles, except that he came to Kentucky with his brother Edward. He was probably a soldier in the Revolution, like his brother Charles, for besides Charles there were Ignatius, Maryland, Richard and Thomas Beaven in the Continental armies, also a Joseph Beavin and David, George and Joseph Finch. Charles Beaven, known by the records at Annapolis and at Washington, volunteered under Captain Posey as a private early in 1776, was appointed ensign July 28, 1777, promoted to lieutenant January 26, 1778, and so served in Alex Trueman's Company of the 10th Maryland Regiment, of the Maryland line, commanded by the heroic Colonel O. H. Williams, made afterwards a general, and conceded to be the best-dressed, best-equipped, best-drilled and most reliable body of troops in the Army. Charles was in many battles and skirmishes, notably in the battles of York Island, White Plains and Germantown, in the last-named he was seriously wounded and soon thereafter was promoted to the position of captain, but in July 1781 he was forced to resign on account of disabilities caused by his wounds. The Maryland line distinguished itself from the very beginning of the war to the end, fighting in practically all engagements, beginning at Bunker Hill and ending at Yorktown. All of John Clements' sons were in the Maryland line. Captain Beaven applied for and was given a pension while residing in Harford County, Maryland, in 1819, his age then 64, so born 1755. The record shows that he drew his pension in Washington County, Kentucky, in 1823. There is no history as to his marriage, but it is a safe guess that in one, or both, of the marriages between a Charles Beaven and a Miss Sasser, he figured as a principal. Webb says that he and his brother Edward came to Kentucky in an early day and that he returned to Maryland, and died there and that he was a widower. It is far more probable that as he was shown to be in Kentucky in 1823, that he died here. I have no trace of any possible family he may have left. (3)

It is pretty certain that his brother Edward came to Kentucky as early as 1790. The first thing found in the records is a conveyance of John Smith to Edward Beavin (so spelled) of 100 acres of land on waters of Hardin's Creek, February 7, 1798, Roger Roney and Flanagans attesting witnesses, and deed acknowledged before John Haggin of Mercer County, Kentucky. Land was also conveyed to one John Beaven in 1810 and to one John Bevan from Anthony Hundley 1810, while John Smith conveyed land on Rolling Fork to Ben. F. Beaven 1814, the last was evidently a son of Edward, named Ben. Finch. A Nicholas Beaven got land of Walton in 1816. We cannot be certain as to whom Edward Beaven married. Her given name was Eleanor and tradition indicates she was a widow Wheeler. Now on the 27th day of October, 1780, Eleanor Wheeler married her cousin Samuel Wheeler in Prince George's County, Maryland, and as his mother had married a Wheeler, contact between the two families was necessarily close. I am persuaded that this Eleanor, left a young widow, became the wife of Edward Beaven. These Wheelers were all descendants of the doughty Major John, already mentioned, the organizer of Charles County who, coming into Maryland as did the Comegys, Andrew Clements, Hansons, and others, from the Swedish Colony of Delaware, was naturalized, like them, as a Swede.

Edward Beaven was a prosperous farmer near St. Mary's, now Marion County, where he died intestate in 1821, his wife having survived him, leaving a considerable landed estate, fourteen slaves and about $5,000 in personalty. His sons were John, Ben. Finch, Charles and Edward; daughters Elizabeth married Henry Luckett, Teresa married John (Jack) Heard Abell of Captain John Barton Abell (see Chapter VI), Ann married Leonard Hamilton of Leonard Hamilton of Old Washington County, and left issue among whom were the Priest Rev. ——— Hamilton, who died at Fort Wayne, Ind., leaving a large estate to charity and who was a first cousin to Archbishop Spalding and Dr. William Hamilton who settled at Hodgenville, Ky., where he married Mary Brown and was long county clerk of that county and left issue, Harriet married Isaac Pottinger of Washington County, Kentucky, July 12, 1823, and he dying within a year, she married John (Jack) Spalding November 17, 1826 (see Chapter IV). His son Ben. Finch married Margaret McAtee and left: Edward married E. J. Mattingly, Eleanor married Ambrose Smith, Robert I., Elizabeth married John Chandler, and Caroline married Wm. Mulligan of Washington County, Kentucky. His son Charles A. born 1796 married Cecilia Luckett, sister of Henry, and had issue: Thomas married Eliza Burns, Leo married Catharine Mattingly, Kendrick married widow Smith, Lizzie married Wm. Mattingly, Isabelle married D. C. Mattingly, Charles, a soldier in 10th Kentucky U. S., married first, Susana Mattingly, daughter of E. H. and Alethea Spalding Mattingly, second, Julia Mattingly, and Henry married Maria Smith. His son John married Mary Smith and left: Eleanor, Lizzie married Joe Hagan, Sam married Miss Rafferty, Teresa became a nun at Loretto, Ky., Cordelia married C. S. Hill of Hon. C. S. Hill, left issue, Anette married John Thomas, of Abell, of Washington County (see Chapter VI) and had issue, Ben F. married Mary Brown, Thomas A. married Lillie Mudd, Nannie died 1873, and Julia. Elizabeth married Henry Luckett, son of Thomas Hussey Luckett and great-grandson of Ignatius Luckett of Charles County, Maryland, and Jane Hanson Luckett, daughter of John Hanson, founder of the distinguished family, said Ignatius, a grandson of Thomas Hussey on whose farm Charles County Court House was built, and left Austin, married Jane Abell, Ben. married Cynthia Mills, and then Betsey Spalding, John married Catharine Elder, Madison married Emily Elder and Hussey married Araminta Abell, left Alice married J. W. Spalding (see Chapter IV). His son Edward was a physician who settled in Mazatlan, Mexico, where he married a Spanish lady who brought him a large dowery in sheep as daughter of a rich ranchman. He left issue; one, or more, of his sons was sent to Kentucky to be educated, but nothing more could be learned of his family.

Census of 1790 shows heads of families Prince George's County, Maryland, Charles Beaven, Sr., Charles Beaven, Charles Beaven and John Taylor Beaven, and there was a Richard T. Bevin in Nelson County, Kentucky, in 1811, may have been the brother of Ed. and Charles Beaven. Wm. Beavin married Ann Brashier, and Ann married Richard Jones in Queen Ann Parish, Prince George's County, Maryland, 1725 and 1734, while a Charles Beaven paid five pounds to St. Paul's Church, T. J. Clagget, pastor, afterwards Episcopal Bishop (see Chapter III) in 1794, and the horrid test oath was signed by Charles Bevan in that church in 1733. There was a Richard Beaven on the rent rolls for Prince George's County, Maryland, 115 acres 1665 and a Charles Beaven on same 1680. Semmes says a Charles Beaven married Ann Middleton, widow of Thomas Jenkins, died 1769.

Horace Cromwell Bevan of Baltimore of our line, despite the spelling and Puritan name, gives this as the Coat of Arms: Azure, a dove argent beaked and legged gules between three gem rings or, in chief a mullet charged with same.

Crest: On mount vest a dove rising in the beak a gem ring.

Motto: "Semper virtute constans."

CHAPTER VI THE ABELL LINE

The Abell family is undoubtedly of French origin and I believe of an old Latin stock, evidenced, even yet, by the swarthy skin, dark hair and eyes of those bearing this name. Among the prominent personages recorded as the chief followers of the Conqueror in 1066 is the name of an Abell, still to be seen inscribed on the walls of Battle Abbey at Senlac. The name, often spelled Abel, has been common in England since 1273, and persons of this name have ever since been active and prominent in all the walks of civil, political and religious life in the British Isles. Many of them, in the great religious Revolution of Henry VIII, adhered to the old Catholic Church of their fathers, the victims of fines, confiscations, imprisonments and other persecutions meted out to Catholic Recusants for two hundred and fifty years; some even suffered martyrdom. One Thomas Abell, chaplain of Queen Catharine, was thrown into the tower and while languishing there, carved a bell in the stone of the wall, surmounted with an A., and the name Thomas above, the only way he could tell his sad story. This carving has been foolishly taken to be a coat of arms; it was merely an emblem of torture suffered.

The first of the name to enter Maryland was Captain Robert Abell in the earlier years of the settlement. Whether he earned his title as commander of a ship or as a militia officer, I cannot say, but the fact that I have been unable to connect his name with the ownership of real estate or to find will, or other evidence of his dying in the Colony, impels the conclusion that he was a seaman, trading with the Colony, and after settling some or all of his children in the Colony returned to England and died there. It is certain he was engaged in business in the Colony before 1649 for in that year he, by his attorney, Cuthbert Fenwick, sued one David O'Doherty for 1,000 pounds of tobacco as is told in Maryland Archives. James Abell, a servant, was transported into Baltimore County, 1664; Charles Abell, a servant, transported 1669, and Robert Abell transported 1675 by James Inces into Baltimore County. Hendrick Abell, a cordwainer, came in on his own resources to Somerset County 1667, bringing his wife Sophia and children Joseph, Robert and Gartrick, called servants and for which he got 200 acres of land. Family names, location in St. Mary's County indicate to a reasonable certainty that Captain Robert Abell was our ancestor, though I find no other reference to him. A Richard Abell was sued and attached in St. Mary's and Calvert counties in 1658 (the family settled near the line of separation) and I suspect he was the oldest son of the captain, though a possible brother, and
