Cox's ornament hangs on White House tree

NINIE GLASSCOCK

Editor/general manager

Susan Crum-Cox's seven-year-old son, Alex, helped her keep the whole thing in perspective. When she told him last week that an ornament she had made was hanging on President Clinton's Christmas tree in the White House, Alex flashed her a brilliant smile.

"That's wonderful, Mommy!" he exclaimed. "I'm hungry. Can I have a turkey sandwich, please?"

But then, the art teacher at St. Catharine College has never had a problem with taking herself too seriously. As a matter of fact, she almost didn't take the letter requesting the ornament seriously enough.

"When you get a letter with a return address listing 'The White House,' the tendency is to think: 'Yeah, sure,' and toss the letter in the trash," Crum-Cox says with a smile. "But I opened it and read it. And sure enough, it was legitimate. They really did want me to make an ornament for the President's Christmas tree."

The letter was the beginning. It came to the native Marion Countian on Sept. 2. In four brief paragraphs, it informed her that because the official holiday theme

Calls attention to road

(From the Loretto correspondent)-

As soon as the Standard of last week came out with the item calling attention to the Livers Spring Road, they went right to work on it and will soon have it in good order. So much for the good the Standard does down here. Mr. J.A. Alvey is putting the Holy Cross and Chicago Road in good order, and Mr. Richard Smith proposed to work the Loretto and Burk's Mill Road this week. So you see we are waking up the road questions.

Fire destroys barn

Fire from an "undetermined origin" destroyed the tobacco barn on the farm of Henry Turner, about five miles from Campbellsville.

Halloween cause loss of $8,000

Halloween went beyond the joking stage in some places. James E. Peake, New Haven, lost a corn crib and barn to Halloween pranksters last Thursday night. The barn contained his year's harvest of hay. Total loss due to the fire was placed near $8,000.

Archie Clark, who lives near the crib and barn, was watching the buildings for Peake, but near midnight he left to get himself coffee and was scarcely out of sight when the entire place went up in flames. Apparently the person's responsible for the fire were waiting for him to leave.

John Cox Family Among Earliest To Settle In Eastern Kentucky

The Life and Times of A Wolfe County Family

By Scott E. Sallee - 1998

John Cox was born in Grayson County, Virginia on March 8, 1784, the son of James and Elizabeth (widow Terrill) Cox. James Cox's father, Captain John Cox, was a lifelong Indian fighter, having been captured by them at age 16 and held prisoner for six months, and fought in the Indian wars on the Virginia frontier from 1757-63. In 1762, Captain John Cox married Margaret Davis and came to Fort Chiswell, Virginia, where James was born in 1763. During the Revolutionary War, Captain John Cox commanded the Montgomery County, Virginia Militia, which fought against the Tories and Indians on the Virginia/North Carolina border, and was wounded in the Battle of Whitsell's Mill. In 1778, at the age of 15, James Cox enlisted under his father as a private, and served three years as a Tory spy and Indian scout. After the war, James married Elizabeth Terrill, the widow of Timothy Terrill, who had been killed by Indians, in Tennessee. James and Elizabeth Cox had eight children, of which John was the oldest.

About 1803, John Cox married Judith Sexton (born in 1782), the daughter of Benjamin and Comfort (Smith) Sexton. Benjamin Sexton and his brothers, William and Joseph, had all served under Capt. John Cox in the Revolutionary War. About 1805, John and Judith Cox, along with Benjamin and Comfort Sexton, and other members of the Cox and Sexton families, moved to Kentucky and settled in a portion of Montgomery County, which later became part of Bath County. In 1812, John Cox's brother, Solomon, joined them and married Benjamin and Comfort Sexton's daughter, Ann.

About 1815, John and Judith Cox

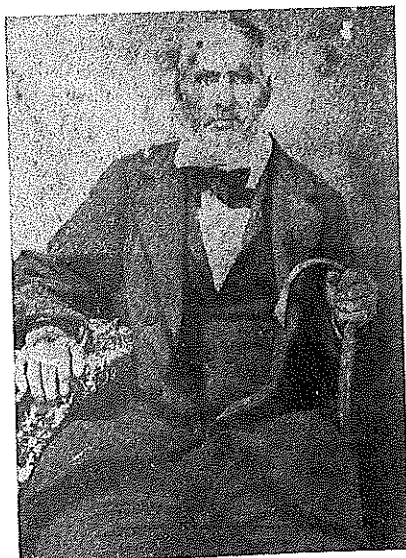

established the Cox's Mill Settlement on the North Fork of the Red River, near Hazel Green, in then Floyd, later Morgan, now Wolfe County, Kentucky; where they built a mill to grind grain. Traditionally it is claimed to be the first water mill in Eastern Kentucky. Records show they existed on Lulbegrud Creek in Montgomery County, in the 1790s.

John and Judith Cox had seven children who lived to adulthood, the oldest one born in Virginia, the rest in Kentucky. They were: William (1804-1892), married Cynthia Reed; Cynthia (1808-?), married Edmond Price Lewis; James (1811-1899), married Annie Hanks; Darinda "Rindy" (1814-1902), married James Curtis Stamper; Benjamin F. "Ben" (1816-?), married 1st, Zarilda Ellington, and 2nd, Malinda McCormick; Elizabeth "Betsy" (1822-1905), married Thomas Pieratt; and Sarah Ann (called Ann), (1824-?), married Archibald "Arch" Day.

In old age, Benjamin and Comfort Sexton moved to the Cox's Mill settlement where they lived the rest of their lives. Benjamin died in 1831, at age 78, and Comfort in 1844, at age 90.

John Cox was the owner of two slaves, London and Barney. According to family tradition, they were given to John by his father before leaving Virginia for Kentucky in 1805. However, James Cox's Bible gives London and Barney's birthdates as 1826 and 1817, respectively. Therefore, it is more likely that James left London and Barney to John in his will, and upon James' death in 1841, they traveled to Kentucky to their new master.

Judith Cox, who was blind in old age, died in September, 1860. The following year the Civil War broke out, and all of the able-bodied Cox men enlisted in the Confederate Army, leaving the slaves to run the mill. John Cox died in February, 1863, and was buried on his trundle bed, as he requested. After the Civil War ended, London and Barney were freed, but according to tradition, continued working for the Cox family. This is certainly the case with London, whose name appears in Wolfe County records until his death in 1899.

James and Annie Cox

James Cox was born March 1, 1811, in Montgomery (later Bath) County, Kentucky, to John and Judith (Sexton) Cox, and grew to adulthood at the Cox's Mill Settlement. On February 2, 1831, James Cox married Annie Hanks, who was born in 1811, in Montgomery County, Kentucky, to Fielden and Lydia (Harper) Hanks. Fielden Hanks (1783-1861) was an early Kentucky pioneer who had served in the War of 1812, built the first permanent residence in the town of Campton, in 1818, and was elected one of the first magistrates of Morgan County, Kentucky, in 1824. Lydia Harper (1788-1861) was a full-blooded Choctaw Indian, who was born at Fort Boonesboro, Kentucky, to John and Mary Ann Harper, who were originally from Mississippi.

James and Annie Cox had seven children who lived to adulthood. They were: Judith "Jude" (1832-1910), married Jordon Wills, had ten children; Lydia (1833-1905), married John Kenny Brown, had twelve children; Andrew J. "Jack" (1836-1887), married 1st, Lucinda Stamper, one child; 2nd, Rebecca Hall, had nine children; Joshua B. (1841-1862), never married; Fielden (1844-1915), married 1st, Martha "Mattie" Catron, had thirteen children; 2nd, Elizabeth (Hogg) Tutt (widow), no children; John (1846-1919), married Jane Catron, had two children; and Nancy "Nan" (1850-1942), married Albert "Allie" Landrum, had twelve children.

In the fall of 1861, James Cox, at age 50, enlisted in the Confederate Army for one year, along with his sons Jack, Joshua, and Fielden, and all were assigned to Capt. Henry C. "Chap" Swango's Company of the 5th Kentucky Mounted Infantry. The 5th Kentucky, which was part of Gen. Humphrey Marshall's Eastern Kentucky command, spent its year of service maneuvering against Federal forces in that area, fighting several skirmishes. In a battle at Stillwater, near Campton, Fielden Cox, at age seventeen, was standing right next to Capt. Swango when he was killed, and as Benjamin Day recalled, "It was always claimed in Rebel circles that Fielden Cox killed the man who killed Swango." On August 14, 1862, Joshua Cox was killed by his older brother Jack, who hit him with a gun during an argument.

Its term of service expired, the 5th Kentucky disbanded near Hazel Green in late August 1862. James, along with sons Jack, Fielden and John, and son-in-law Jordon Wills, enlisted in Co. A, 2nd Battalion, Kentucky Mounted Rifles, which was assigned to the District of southwest Virginia. In the summer of 1863, the 2nd Batt. was detached to Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest's Cavalry Division, and fought in the Battle of Chickamauga, Georgia, the following September. Later that fall, they accompanied Gen. Joseph Wheeler's cavalry into Tennessee. While skirmishing dismounted between Shelbyville and Farmington, Tennessee, James Cox was wounded in the thigh, and carried from the field by his sons, Fielden and John, and nephew Benjamin Day.

After the raid with Wheeler, the 2nd Batt. returned to Virginia, under the command of Gen. John Hunt Morgan. In April 1864, Fielden Cox was captured near West Liberty, Kentucky, while scouting for Gen. Morgan. He was sent to prison at Camp Morton Indiana, where his health deteriorated, so quickly, that he was paroled and sent home, in February 1865.

James, Jack, and John Cox, and Jordon Wills served with the 2nd Batt. until the end of the war. They accompanied Gen. Morgan on his last Kentucky raid in the summer of 1864, and were in the fight at Greeneville, Tennessee, on September 4, 1864, where Morgan was killed. They were paroled at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, on May 1, 1865.

Lucinda Brown Sallee, wife of Henry H. Sallee, was the daughter of John and Lydia Cox Brown, and the oldest of fifty-nine grandchildren of James and Annie Hanks Cox. Her mother was one-fourth Choctaw, her father full or half Cherokee.

This is a photo of the author in 1965 with his great-great-uncle Field Brown, Winchester, Kentucky. Fielden S. Brown (1875-1968), was the youngest of twelve children of John K. and Lydia Cox Brown. He was named after his mother's maternal grandfather, Fielden Hanks.

After the war, James Cox returned to farming at the Cox's Mill settlement. In their old age, James and Annie lived in the opposite ends of a dog-trot cabin, and rarely, if ever, spoke to one another. James Cox died about 1899 and was buried atop a hill, in a grave that he had chiseled himself, in a bed of solid rock.

After James' death, Annie lived with her son-in-law and daughter, Allie and Nan Landrum. One winter, when about the age of 90, Annie walked from the Landrum place to Lacy Creek, a distance of about ten miles, to see a newborn great-great granddaughter. Annie died on Dec. 23, 1903, and was buried in the Landrum Cemetery.

The following article appeared in the Hazel Green Herald in 1892.

We doubt if there is anywhere, a more remarkable family exists, than the Cox family of this county. There is now living, of this particular family, seven brothers and sisters. Their average age is seventy-seven years, eight months, and seventeen days, or close to it, while their aggregate age is 544 years. Below we give the names of these remarkable people, together with their present residence and date of birth:

William Cox, eighty-eight, lives near Hazel Green, and was born October 1, 1804.

Mrs. Cynthia Lewis, lives in Wolfe County, born November 7, 1808.

James Cox, lives in Wolfe, born March 1, 1811.

Mrs. Rinda Stamper, lives in Wolfe, born June 20, 1814.

Dr. Ben F. Cox, lives in Mt. Sterling, born February 29, 1816.

All of the above named persons are also in the enjoyment of good health, with the exception of the first named, William Cox, who is quite feeble.

The following article appeared in the October 28, 1892 issue of the Hazel Green Herald.

There was a man in town last week, and by the way, was one of seven children recently mentioned in these columns, who is today probably the most remarkable politician in Kentucky. He is eighty-one years of age, and if he lives to vote at the November election, will have voted sixty-six times in the Hazel Green precinct; each and every vote being cast for the Democratic nominees, and never held office of any kind, so far as we are informed. He has 141 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren; only one great-great grandchild, and out of the entire lot only eighteen have strayed from the Democratic fold to the Republican ranks. The gentleman referred to James Cox, a brother of Uncle Billy, lately deceased, and of Dr. B.F. Cox, of Mt. Sterling, they being the only three brothers.

The following obituary appeared in the Hazel Green Herald in 1899.

LONDON COX, one of the most respected colored citizens of the county, died Saturday night at 10 o'clock at his home on Chapel Branch, of the infirmities of old age. He was about seventy-five years old, but suffered a fracture of one of his thigh bones, when quite young, which made him a cripple the balance of his days, and from which he always suffered more or less pain, especially in his declining years. He left no family except his wife and Harry Cox, an adopted boy whom he raised; the one issue of his marriage having died some years ago. The burial took place at 5 o'clock Sunday evening, the remains being laid to rest on his own farm.

These are the graves of John and Judith Cox in the Cox's Mill Cemetery, near the old community of Toliver, in Wolfe County, Kentucky. The small markers were obtained and placed there by the author with help from several of the Cox descendants. John's marker notes that he was buried on his trundle bed.

Cooper

Lorenzo Dow Cooper was born March 31, 1819, in Daviess County, Kentucky, and is the only child of Joshua G. and Alice Rowan Cooper. The father was reared on the banks of the Susquehanna River, in Pennsylvania, until a young man; then came to Kentucky, first locating in Ohio County, and soon afterward married Mrs. John Douglas. After making several moves he settled in Ohio County, where he died in 1826; his widow survived until April of 1851. Lorenzo D., while yet a boy, materially aided his mother and finally became her entire support, and continued so up to her death. At 24 years of age he married Mary P. Bennett, and to them were born nine children, two of which were Samuel O. and Alice P. (wife of William J. Riley). Mr. Cooper's present wife was Mrs. Elizabeth Henry, nee Polley. They are members of the Methodist Church, of which he is a trustee. He is a Democrat politically, and renders much aid to the furtherance of the temperance cause, having in early life been a Good Templar. He has a fine, improved farm of his own making, upon which he has resided since 1847, and has given over 100 acres to his children.

J. Will Cooper, of Ohio County, is the son of W. P.

and Catherine Cooper, both natives of Ohio County, Kentucky; the former born in 1819, and died in September of 1884; the latter was born in 1829, and was still living at the time of this book's publishing. Both were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. J. Will Cooper was born near Beaver Dam, August 19, 1852; and was brought up in the same county, and was educated at Hartford College, under the principalship of Professor Griffin. He has two brothers and two sisters; Ed W., deputy county clerk and farmer; Mrs. Mary Austin; and Charles and Annie on the old homestead, near Beaver Dam. Mr. Cooper went into business in 1868, at Beaver Dam, under the firm name of Cooper & Brother. Theirs was the first business house in that town. In 1875 he removed to Cromwell and went into the hotel and saloon business; afterward engaged in general merchandising, and was one of the leading dealers in that town. His store comprised general merchandise, furniture, agricultural implements, hardware, etc. He was a young man of energy and ambition, and ran a fine business in town and in the county. June 7, 1874, he married Annie Milford, eldest daughter of W. G. Milford, a leading citizen of Cromwell, and for many years a hotel keeper in that town. They had one daughter, Tomie, born in November 1876. J. W. Cooper moved from Cromwell on July 4, 1885, back to Beaver Dam and was thenceforth engaged in the hotel business under the name of Beaver Dam Hotel Company.

Cox

Samuel K. Cox was born June 16, 1838, in Hawesville, Hancock County, Kentucky; a son of Samuel K. and Caroline Davidson Cox. The father, a steamboat man on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, was a native of Virginia and came to Kentucky with his parents. He was born in 1799, in Norfolk, Virginia, and died at Lewisport, Hancock County, in 1860. The parents were for many years members of the Methodist Church. They had nine children, four of which were Margaret A. Garb (widow), Mrs. Jennie F. Mosley (widow), Samuel K. and William T., a carpenter in Hartford. Our subject was reared in Hawesville, attended the schools of that place, and at the age of 15 began supporting himself by clerking in a store at Hawesville, and was thus chiefly engaged until 20 years of age. He then accepted a position as clerk on a steamboat one season, and came to Hartford in 1860. He entered the county clerk's office as deputy, under R. S. Mosely, and after five months went to Morgantown, and was deputy county clerk there for one year. In September 1861, he enlisted in Company A, 17th Kentucky Infantry, as a private. In May of 1862, he was promoted by order of General Nelson to second lieutenant, and transferred to Company F of a now unknown regiment. In the spring of 1863, he was made first lieutenant, and assigned to Company E. In March of 1864, he was made captain and put in command of the old Company A, and served until January of 1865, in all three years and four months, and never lost a day from his command. He participated in the Battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh (both days), Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, and in the Atlanta campaign. It was his regiment that brought on the fight at Franklin.

After his return to Hartford, he entered the county clerk's office as deputy in 1865, and served five years, when he was elected clerk. He was elected three times consecutively, and from 1870 to 1876 was master commissioner. In 1882, at the time of his expiration of office term, he organized the bank of Hartford, with Mr. McHenry, and took the position of cashier, which he held for many years. On April 20, 1870, he married Miss Irene Brotherton, of Owensboro, Kentucky, daughter of John and Rebecca Brotherton. Four of their children were Mary W., Ella W., Corina, and Samuel S., Mr. and Mrs. Cox were Methodists.
