Historical Sketches of North Carolina, From 1584 to 1851. Compiled from Original Records, Official Documents, and Traditional Statements.
By John Hill Wheeler.

After quite a while of looking I found the lineage of Richard Henderson of North Carolina. This I add in hopes of interesting other Henderson researchers who wonder his relationship to the line of Hendersons from Eastern Tennessee.

His father was Samuel Henderson and mother Elizabeth Williams. He was born Apr 20, 1735 in Hanover County, Va. He was a Judge under the Colonial Government, and a man of distinguished enterprise and intellect. He was the father of Judge Leonard Henderson, Chief Justice of Supreme Court and the late Archibald Henderson.

His ancestors by his fathers side were from Scotland, and his mothers side Williams from Wales.

His father came to Granville County, NC about 1745; and subsequently was appointed the sheriff of that county. The duties in which his son was employed afforded the practical knowledge of men and things, for which Judge Henderson was distinguished in after life. He read law with his cousin Judge Williams, for twelve months.

In 1774 the Cherokee Indians offered for sale thier lands. He formed a company with John Williams and Leonard Hendly Bullock, of Granville; William Johnston, James Hogg, Thomas Hart, John Luttrell, Nathaniel Hart and David Hart of Orange County, and made a treaty on the banks of the Watauga River. He purchased from the Indians, for a fair consideration, all their lands south of the Kentucky River, beginning at the mouth or junction of said river with the Ohio to its source, thence south into Tennessee, until a westward y line should cross the Cumberland Mountain so as to strike the ridge which divides the waters of the Tennessee River from those of the Cumberland, and with that ridge to the Ohio River, and with that river to the mouth of the Kentucky River aforesaid; including a large portion of the States of Tennessee and Kentucky.

The company took possession of the lands on the 20th of April, 1775; the Indians appointing an agent, John Farrar, to make a delivery according to law.

The Gov. of North Carolina, Martin, issued his proclamation in 1775 declaring this purchase illegal. The State subsequently granted 200,000 acres to the company in lieu of this.

The State of Virginia declared the same, but granted the company a remuneration of two hundred thousand acres, bounded by the Ohio and Green Rivers.

The State of Tennessee claimed the lands, but made a similar grant to the company in Powell's Valley.

In 1779 Judge Henderson was appointed a commissioner to extend the line between Virginia and North Carolina into Powell's Valley. His associates on this commission were Oroondates Davis, John Williams of Caswell, James Kerr and William Bailey Smith. A difficulty arose as to the true latitude of 36 degrees 0 minutes, and the commission was closed.

This same year, Judge Henderson opened a land office, at the French Lick, now Nashville, Tennessee, for the sale of the company's land.

In the summer following he returned home, where in the bosom of his friends and family, he enjoyed the evening of life in peace and plenty. On the 30th of January, 1785, he died at his seat in Granville, loved and esteemed by all who knew him.

He left (by his marriage with Elizabeth Keeling, a stepdaughter of the late Judge Williams) six children, Fanny, born 1754, who married Judge McCay of Salisbury; Richard, born July 1766; Archibald, born August 1768; Elizabeth, who married Alexander, born 1770; Leonard, born 1772; and John Lawson Henderson, born 1778.

All four sons studied the same profession for which their father had been so distinguished; and their reputation did not disgrace their ancestor. Richard, Jr. died at the early age of 30, but gave every promise of distinction had his life been spared; Archibald was the head of his profession, in Western Carolina, a distinguished member of Congress, and the legislature. Leonard was one of the first lawyers of his day, and attained the eminence of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina; and John, the youngest son, was blessed with a clear mind, and was distinguished for his learning; but, for a diffidence of manner, never exerted himself to use those means to attain the eminence of his illustrious brothers. he was a member of the legislature from Salisbury, Comptroller of the State in 1825, and died at Raleigh in 1843, while attending to his duties a Clerk of the Supreme Court.
